Africa doesn't work; the disorder results in a net loss to Africa. Why Africans do not do enough to change the institutional and organizational order is an interesting reasearch topic. How one can help Africans do something about this predicament is also an interesting research topic. But to say that the disorder works is illogical.

272 AFRICA WORKS: DISORDER AS POLITICAL INSTRUMENT Chabal and Daloz's conclusion that African institutions face a crisis of effectiveness is a broad generalisation, which, as all generalisations do, tends to conceal some consequential differences. Comparative studies may assist in this endeavour. Local government in Zambia and Zimbabwe is a case in point.
